returned as representatives, being qualified by the said Silas Condict, took their seats in the house.

The members adjourned till to-morrow morning, ten of the clock.

Wednesday, October 26, 1796.

The members met.

William Wikoff, returned as one of the representatives for the county of Monmouth, James Morgan, as one of the representatives for the county of Middlesex, and James VanDuyn, as one of the representatives for the county of Somerset, appeared in the house and produced the respective certificates of their election, which were read, approved and ordered to be filed; whereupon, being duly sworn by Mr. Condict, who was appointed for that purpose, they took their seats in the house, and having rendered to the house excuses for their non-attendance before this time, the same was deemed satisfactory.

The members proceeded to the appointment of a speaker, when James H. Inlay was chosen and took the chair.

The house proceeded to the election of a clerk, when Maskell Ewing was unanimously chosen.

Maskell Ewing attended, and after taking the oath of allegiance, and also an oath for the faithful discharge of his office, he took his seat as clerk.

Resolved, That David Wrighter be door-keeper to this house during the present session.

Ordered, That Mr. Berry do wait on the Council and acquaint them that the House of Assembly have this day proceeded to business, and have chosen James H. Inlay their speaker.

Ordered, That Messrs. Wade, Coxe and Condict, be a committee to bring forward a draught of rules and regulations for the better government of the house.

Mr. Outwater, from Council, informed the house that a sufficient number of members of Council have met, elected the honourable James Linn, Esquire, vice-president, and proceeded to business.

Mr. Berry reported, that he had obeyed the order of the house.

Elijah Townsend attended the house and produced a certificate that he had been duly elected as a representative from the county of Cape-May, which was signed by Jacob Godfrey, judge, Joseph Wheaton, Elijah Shaw and Elijah Godfrey, inspectors, which was read.

Eleazer Hand also attended and produced a certificate that he had been duly elected as a representative of the county of Cape-May, which was signed by Robert Schenck and Uriah Smith, inspectors of the election, which was read; whereupon,

Mr. Hand laid before the house a remonstrance against the proceedings of Jacob Godfrey, who was judge of the said election, with a certificate from two of the inspectors, and the affidavit of the three clerks.

William Worth appeared before the house and delivered a state of the votes taken in the several precincts of the county of Cape-May on the respective days of the election, and a paper, signed by Jacob Godfrey, said to be a true statement of real facts as to his conduct respecting the opening and holding the general election in the county of Cape-May, which were also read ; whereupon,

The following question was taken :

Does it appear from the documents before the house that Mr. Townsend is duly elected ?

Which, being put, was unanimously determined in the negative.

The house adjourned until three o'clock, P. M.

The house met.

Thursday, November 3, 1796.

The house met.

Mr. Moore, from the committee to whom was referred the bill, intituled, "A supplement to an act, intituled, "An act to lay out a road on the southerly side of Cohansey-Creek, in the county of Cumberland, and establish a ferry across the said creek, from the town of Greenwich to the said road," passed the 28th June, 1766, reported,

THAT having duly considered the bill, with the remonstrances accompanying the same, are of opinion, that it is not expedient to alter the rates of the ferriage at this time; but as the proprietors of said ferry are willing to exonerate the lessee, agreeably to his wish, and to give the parties opportunity for accommodation, it is the opinion of your committee, that the further consideration of the bill be postponed till the next sitting of the Legislature.

By order of the committee,

DAVID MOORE.

To which the house agreed.

Mr. Dayton, from the committee appointed to devise ways and means to carry into effect the law for the punishment of crimes, reported,

THAT in the opinion of your committee, provision ought to be made by the Legislature for securing to the state the salutary effects contemplated by the said law, by erecting a suitable building for confining and employing convicts, under the said law, during the term of their respective sentences; that such building ought to be so situated and constructed as to answer for all parts of the state, and that provision ought to be made by law for transporting, confining and employing convicts, from the several counties of the state, under proper officers, regulations and restrictions—For completing an object so desirable and important to the community, we recommend that a committee be appointed to consult with competent artificers, and report to the house their opinion as to the size and construction of such building, and to make an estimate of the sum of money probably necessary to be appropriated for that purpose, and that the house determine in what part of the state the said building shall be placed.

By order of the committee,

The speaker laid before the house resolutions expressive of the high sense which this house entertain of the conduct of the President of the United States, which were read and approved, and are as follow:

The House of Assembly, calling to mind the approaching period at which the President of the United States has declared his intention of retiring from public to private life, embrace with pleasure this early occasion to express their own, and, in their opinion, the sentiments of their constituents, suggested by that approaching event;

Resolved unanimously, That the wisdom, firmness and patriotism of the President of the United States during his administration, and his faithful and highly important services rendered to the government of the union at the most critical and interesting periods of its existence, have a just claim to the thanks and approbation of this house.

Resolved unanimously, That the late address of the President to the citizens of the United States is, in the opinion of this house, replete with sentiments of political wisdom, truth and justice, and merits our grateful acknowledgment; and while we sincerely regret and lament his determination to retire from the superintendence of the government of the United States, the anxiety and solicitude which we sensibly and irresistably feel on this occasion, are in some degree diminished by the hope and expectation that his successor in office will be emulous to imitate his virtue and pursue the wise and wholesome system of politics which has so conspicuously distinguished his administration, and so effectually secured to us the inestimable blessings of peace and the present unparralleled prosperity of our country.

Ordered, That the foregoing resolutions be sent to Council for concurrence, and that the speaker of the House of Assembly be requested to present a copy thereof to the President of the United States.

Ordered, That the same be engrossed.

The house adjourned till to-morrow morning, ten of the clock.

The House of Assembly, sensibly affected by a recollection of the eminent services of George Washington, President of the United States, and desirous of diffusing among the citizens of this state a knowledge of the principles which have directed his administration,

Resolved, That the late excellent address of the President of the United States is entitled to a place in the journals of this house.

Which address is as follows :

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES.

FRIENDS & FELLOW-CITIZENS,

THE period for a new election of a citizen to administer the executive government of the United States being not far distant, and the time actually arrived when your thoughts must be employed in designating the person who is to be clothed with that important trust, it appears to me proper, especially as it may conduce to a more distinct expression of the public voice, that I should now apprise you of the resolution I have formed, to decline being considered among the number of those out of whom a choice is to be made.

I beg you, at the same time, to do me the justice to be assured, that this resolution has not been taken without a strict regard to all the considerations appertaining to the relation which binds a dutiful citizen to his country ; and that, in withdrawing the tender of service which silence in my situation might imply, I am influenced by no diminution of zeal for your future interest ; no deficiency of grateful respect for your past kindness ; but am supported by a full conviction that the step is compatible with both.

The acceptance of, and continuance hitherto in the office to which your suffrages have twice called me, have been a uniform sacrifice of inclination to the opinion of duty, and to a deference for what appeared to be your desire. I constantly hoped, that it would have been much earlier in my power, consistently with motives which I was not at liberty to disregard, to return to that retirement from which I had been reluctantly drawn. The strength of my resolution to do this, previous to the last election, had even led to the preparation of an address to declare it to you ; but mature reflection on the then perplexed and critical posture of our affairs with foreign nations, and the unanimous advice of persons entitled to my confidence, impelled me to abandon the idea.

I rejoice that the state of your concerns, external as well as internal, no longer renders the pursuit of inclination incompatible with the sentiment of duty, or propriety ; and am persuaded, whatever partiality may be retained for my services, that in the present circumstances of our country, you will not disapprove my determination to retire.

The impressions with which I first undertook the arduous trust, were explained on the proper occasion. In the discharge of this trust, I will only say, that I have, with good intentions, contributed towards the organization and administration of the government, the best exertions of which a very fallible judgment was capable. Not unconscious, in the outset, of the inferiority of my qualifications, experience in my own eyes, perhaps still more in the eyes of others, has strengthened the motives to diffidence of myself ; and every day the increasing weight of years admonishes me more and more that the shade of retirement is as necessary to me as it will be welcome. Satisfied that if any circumstances have given peculiar value to my services, they were temporary, I have the consolation to believe, that while choice and prudence invite me to quit the political scene, patriotism does not forbid it.

In looking forward to the moment, which is intended to terminate the career of my public life, my feelings do not permit me to suspend the deep acknowledgment of that debt of gratitude which I owe to my beloved country, for the many honours it has conferred upon me ; still more for the steadfast confidence with which it has supported me ; and for the opportunities I have thence enjoyed of manifesting my inviolable attachment, by services faithful and persevering, though in usefulness unequal to my zeal. If benefits have resulted to our country from these services, let it always be remembered to your praise, and as an instructive example in our annals, that under circumstances in which the passions, agitated in every direction, were liable to mislead, amidst appearances sometimes dubious—vicissitudes of fortune often discouraging—in situations in which not unfrequently want of success has countenanced the spirit of criticism—the constancy of your support was the essential prop of the efforts, and a guarantee of the plans by which they were effected.—Profoundly penetrated with this idea, I shall carry it with me to my grave, as a strong incitement to unceasing vows that Heaven may continue to you the choicest tokens of its beneficence—that your union and brotherly affection may be perpetual—that the free constitution, which is the work of your hands, may be sacredly maintained—that its administration in every department may be stamped with wisdom and virtue—that, in fine, the happiness of the people of these states, under the auspices of liberty, may be made complete, by so careful a preservation and so prudent a use of this blessing as will acquire to them the glory of recommending it to the applause, the affection and the adoption of every nation which is yet a stranger to it.

Here, perhaps, I ought to stop. But a solicitude for your welfare, which cannot end but with my life, and the apprehension of danger, natural to that solicitude, urge me, on an occasion like the present, to offer to your solemn contemplation, and to recommend to your frequent review, some sentiments, which are the result of much reflection, of no inconsiderable observation, and which appear to me all important to the permanency of your felicity as a people. These will be offered to you with the more freedom, as you can only see in them the disinterested warnings of a parting friend, who can possibly have no personal motive to bias his counsel. Nor can I forget, as an encouragement to it, your indulgent reception of my sentiments on a former and not dissimilar occasion.

Interwoven as is the love of liberty with every ligament of your hearts, no recommendation of mine is necessary to fortify or confirm the attachment.

The unity of government which constitutes you one people, is also now dear to you. It is justly so ; for it is a main pillar in the edifice of your real independence, the support of your tranquility at home, your peace abroad ; of your safety ; of your prosperity ; of that very liberty which you so highly prize. But as it is easy to foresee, that from different causes and from different quarters, much pains will be taken, many artifices employed, to weaken in your minds the conviction of this truth ; as this is the point in your political fortress against which the batteries of internal and external enemies will be most constantly and actively (though often covertly and insidiously) directed, it is of infinite moment that you should properly estimate the immense value of your national union to your collective and individual happiness ; that you should cherish a cordial, habitual and immovable attachment to it ; accustoming yourselves to think and speak of it as of the palladium of your political safety and prosperity ; watching for its preservation with a jealous anxiety ; discountenancing whatever may suggest even a suspicion that it can in any event be abandoned ; and indignantly frowning upon the first dawning of every attempt to alienate any portion of our country from the rest, or to enfeeble the sacred ties which now link together the various parts.

For this you have every inducement of sympathy and interest. Citizens, by birth or choice, of a common country, that country has a right to concentrate your affections. The name of AMERICAN, which belongs to you in your national capacity, must always exalt the just pride of patriotism more than any appellation derived from local discriminations. With slight shades of difference, you have the same religion, manners, habits and political principles. You have in a common cause fought and triumphed together ; the independence and liberty you possess are the work of joint councils, and joint efforts, of common dangers, sufferings and successes.

But these considerations, however powerfully they address themselves to your sensibility, are greatly outweighed by those which apply more immediately to your interest—Here every portion of our country finds the most commanding motives for carefully guarding and preserving the union of the whole.

The North, in an unrestrained intercourse with the South, protected by the equal laws of a common government, finds in the productions of the latter, great additional resources of maritime and commercial enterprise and precious materials of manufacturing industry. The South, in the same intercourse, benefiting by the agency of the North, sees its agriculture grow and its commerce expand. Turning partly into its own channels the seamen of the North, it finds its particular navigation invigorated :—and while it contributes, in different ways, to nourish and increase the general mass of the national navigation, it looks forward to the protection of a maritime strength, to which itself is unequally adapted. The East, in like intercourse with the West, already finds, and in the progressive improvement of interior communication, by land and water, will more and more find a valuable vent for the commodities which it brings from abroad, or manufactures at home. The West derives from the East supplies requisite to its growth and comfort—and what is perhaps of still greater consequence, it must of necessity owe the secure enjoyment of indispensable outlets for its own productions to the weight, influence, and the future maritime strength of the Atlantic side of the union, directed by an indissoluble community of interest as one nation. Any other tenure by which the West can hold this essential advantage, whether derived from its own separate strength, or from an apostate and unnatural connection with any foreign power, must be intrinsically precarious.

While then every part of our country thus feels an immediate and particular interest in union, all the parties combined cannot fail to find in the united mass of means and efforts greater strength, greater resource, proportionably greater security from external danger, a less frequent interruption of their peace by foreign nations ;—and what is of inestimable value ! they must derive from union an exemption from those broils and wars, between themselves, which so frequently afflict neighbouring countries not tied together by the same government ; which their own rivalships alone would be sufficient to produce, but which opposite foreign alliances, attachments and intrigues would stimulate and embitter.—Hence likewise they will avoid the necessity of those overgrown military establishments which, under any form of government, are inauspicious to liberty, and which are to be regarded as particularly hostile to republican liberty ; in this sense it is, that your union ought to be considered as a main prop of your liberty, and that the love of the one ought to endear to you the preservation of the other.

These considerations speak a persuasive language to every reflecting and virtuous mind, and exhibit the continuance of the UNION as a primary object of patriotic desire.—Is there a doubt whether a common government can embrace so large a sphere ?—Let experience solve it. To listen to mere speculation in such a case were criminal. We are authorized to hope that a proper organization of the whole, with auxiliary agency of governments for the respective subdivisions, will afford a happy issue to the experiment. 'Tis well worth a fair and full experiment. With such powerful and obvious motives to union, affecting all parts of our country, while experience shall not have demonstrated its impracticability, there will always be reason to distrust the patriotism of those who in any quarter may endeavour to weaken its bands.

In contemplating the causes which may disturb our union, it occurs as a matter of serious concern, that any ground should have been furnished for characterising parties by Geographical discriminations—Northern and Southern—Atlantic and Western : whence designing men may endeavour to excite a belief that there is a real difference of local interests and views. One of the expedients of party to acquire influence, within particular districts, is to misrepresent the opinions and aims of other districts. You cannot shield yourselves too much against the jealousies and heart burnings which spring from these misrepresentations: They tend to render alien to each other those who ought to be bound together by fraternal affection. The inhabitants of our western country have lately had a useful lesson on this head: They have seen, in the negotiation by the executive, and in the unanimous ratification by the Senate, of the treaty with Spain, and in the universal satisfaction at that event throughout the United States, a decisive proof how unfounded were the suspicions propagated among them of a policy in the general government and in the Atlantic states unfriendly to their interests in regard to the MISSISSIPPI: They have been witnesses to the formation of two treaties, that with Great-Britain and that with Spain, which secure to them every thing they could desire, in respect to our foreign relations, towards confirming their prosperity. Will it not be their wisdom to rely for the preservation of these advantages on the UNION by which they were procured? Will they not henceforth be deaf to those advisers, if such there are, who would sever them from their brethren and connect them with aliens?

To the efficacy and permanency of your union, a government for the whole is indispensable—No alliances, however strict, between the parts can be an adequate substitute; they must inevitably experience the infractions and interruptions which all alliances in all times have experienced. Sensible of this momentous truth, you have improved upon your first essay, by the adoption of a constitution of government better calculated than your former for an intimate union, and for the efficacious management of your common concerns. This government, the offspring of our own choice, uninfluenced and unawed, adopted upon full investigation and mature deliberation, completely free in its principles, in the distribution of its powers, uniting security with energy, and containing within itself a provision for its own amendment, has a just claim to your confidence and your support. Respect for its authority, compliance with its laws, acquiescence in its measures, are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true liberty. The basis of our political systems is the right of the people to make and to alter their constitutions of government—But the constitution, which at any time exists, 'till changed by an explicit and authentic act of the whole people, is sacredly obligatory upon all. The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government.

All obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, controul, counteract, or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities, are destructive of this fundamental principle, and of fatal tendency. They serve to organize faction, to give it an artificial and extraordinary force—to put in the place of the delegated will of the nation, the will of a party, often a small, but artful and enterprizing minority of the community; and, according to the alternate triumphs of different parties, to make the public administration the mirror of the ill-concerted and incongruous projects of faction, rather than the organ of consistent and wholesome plans digested by common councils, and modified by mutual interests.

However combinations or associations of the above description may now and then answer popular ends, they are likely in the course of time and things to become potent engines, by which cunning, ambitious and unprincipled men will be enabled to subvert the power of the people, and to usurp for themselves the reins of government ; destroying afterwards the very engines which have lifted them to unjust dominion.

Towards the preservation of your government, and the permanency of your present happy state, it is requisite, not only that you speedily discountenance irregular oppositions to its acknowledged authority, but also that you resist with care the spirit of innovation upon its principles however specious the pretexts. One method of assault may be to effect in the forms of the constitution alterations which will impair the energy of the system, and thus to undermine what cannot be directly overthrown. In all the changes to which you may be invited, remember that time and habit are at least as necessary to fix the true character of governments, as of other human institutions—that experience is the surest standard, by which to test the real tendency of the existing constitution of a country—that facility in changes upon the credit of mere hypothesis and opinion, exposes to perpetual change, from the endless variety of hypothesis and opinion ; and remember, especially, that for the efficient management of your common interests, in a country so extensive as ours, a government of as much vigour as is consistent with the perfect security of liberty, is indispensable. Liberty itself will find in such a government, with powers properly distributed and adjusted, its surest guardian. It is, indeed, little else than a name, where the government is too feeble to withstand the enterprises of faction, to confine each member of the society within the limits prescribed by the laws, and to maintain all in the secure and tranquil enjoyment of the rights of person and property.

I have already intimated to you, the danger of parties in the state, with particular reference to the founding of them on geographical discriminations. Let me now take a more comprehensive view, and warn you in the most solemn manner against the baneful effects of the spirit of party, generally.

This spirit, unfortunately, is inseparable from our nature, having its root in the strongest passions of the human mind.—It exists under different shapes in all governments, more or less stifled, controuled, or repressed ; but in those of the popular form, it is seen in its greatest rankness, and is truly their worst enemy.

The alternate domination of one faction over another, sharpened by the spirit of revenge, natural to party dissention, which in different ages and countries has perpetrated the most horrid enormities, is itself a frightful despotism.—But this leads at length to a more formal and permanent despotism.—The disorders and miseries, which result, gradually incline the minds of men to seek security and repose in the absolute power of an individual ; and sooner or later the chief of some prevailing faction, more able or more fortunate than his competitors, turns this disposition to the purposes of his own elevation, on the ruins of public liberty.

Without looking forward to an extremity of this kind (which nevertheless ought not to be entirely out of sight) the common and continual mischiefs of the spirit of party are sufficient to make it the interest and duty of a wise people to discourage and restrain it.

It serves always to distract the public councils and enfeeble the public administration. It agitates the community with ill-founded jealousies and false alarms; kindles the animosity of one part against another, foment occasionally riot and insurrection. It opens the door to foreign influence and corruption, which find a facilitated access to the government itself through the channels of party passions. Thus the policy and will of one country are subjected to the policy and will of another.

There is an opinion that parties in free countries are useful checks upon the administration of the government, and serve to keep alive the spirit of liberty. This within certain limits is probably true; and in governments of a monarchical cast, patriotism may look with indulgence, if not with favour, upon the spirit of party. But in those of the popular character, in governments purely elective, it is a spirit not to be encouraged. From their natural tendency, it is certain there will always be enough of that spirit for every salutary purpose. And there being constant danger of excess, the effort ought to be, by force of public opinion, to mitigate and alluage it. A fire not to be quenched; it demands a uniform vigilance to prevent its bursting into a flame, lest, instead of warming it should consume.

It is important likewise, that the habits of thinking in a free country should inspire caution in those entrusted with its administration, to confine themselves within their respective constitutional spheres, avoiding in the exercise of the powers of one department to encroach upon another. The spirit of encroachment tends to consolidate the powers of all the departments in one, and thus to create, whatever the form of government, a real despotism. A just estimate of that love of power, and proneness to abuse it, which predominates in the human heart, is sufficient to satisfy us of the truth of this position. The necessity of reciprocal checks in the exercise of political power; by dividing and distributing it into different depositories, and constituting each the guardian of the public weal against invasions by the others, has been evinced by experiments ancient and modern; some of them in our country and under our own eyes. To preserve them must be as necessary as to institute them. If, in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the constitutional powers be in any particular wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the constitution designates.—But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed.—The precedent must always greatly overbalance in permanent evil any partial or transient benefit which the use can at any time yield.

Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism, who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and to cherish them. A volume could not trace all their connections with private and public felicity. Let it simply be asked, where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths, which are the instruments of investigation in courts of justice? And let us with caution indulge the supposition, that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure; reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle.

'Tis substantially true, that virtue or morality is a necessary spring of popular government. The rule indeed extends with more or less force to every species of free government. Who that is a sincere friend to it can look with indifference upon attempts to shake the foundation of the fabric?

Promote, then, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge. In proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that public opinion should be enlightened.

As a very important source of strength and security, cherish public credit. One method of preserving it, is to use it as sparingly as possible; avoiding occasions of expense by cultivating peace; but remembering also that timely disbursements to prepare for danger, frequently prevent much greater disbursements to repel it; avoiding likewise the accumulation of debt, not only by shunning occasions of expense, but by vigorous exertions in time of peace to discharge the debts which unavoidable war may have occasioned, not ungenerously throwing upon posterity the burthen which we ourselves ought to bear.—The execution of these maxims belongs to your representatives, but it is necessary that public opinion should co-operate.—To facilitate to them the performance of their duty, it is essential that you should practically bear in mind, that towards the payment of debts there must be revenue; that to have revenue there must be taxes; that no taxes can be devised which are not more or less inconvenient and unpleasant; that the intrinsic embarrassment inseparable from the selection of the proper objects (which is always a choice of difficulties) ought to be a decisive motive for a candid construction of the conduct of the government in making it, and for a spirit of acquiescence in the measures, for obtaining revenue which the public exigences may at any time dictate.

Observe good faith and justice towards nations, cultivate Peace and Harmony with all; Religion and Morality enjoin this conduct; and can it be that good policy does not equally enjoin it? It will be worthy of a free, enlightened, and, at no distant period, a great nation, to give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a people always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence. Who can doubt that in the course of time and things the fruits of such a plan would richly repay any temporary advantages which might be lost by a steady adherence to it? Can it be, that Providence has not connected the permanent felicity of a nation with its virtue? The experiment, at least, is recommended by every sentiment which ennobles human nature. Alas! is it rendered impossible by its vices?

In the execution of such a plan, nothing is more essential than that permanent, inveterate antipathies against particular nations, and passionate attachments for others should be excluded; and that in place of them just and amicable feelings towards all should be cultivated. The nation, which indulges towards another an habitual hatred, or an habitual fondness, is in some degree a slave. It is a slave to its animosity or to its affection, either of which is sufficient to lead it astray from its duty and its interest. Antipathy in one nation against another disposes each more readily to offer insult and injury, to lay hold of slight causes of umbrage, and to be haughty and intractable when accidental or trifling occasions of dispute occur. Hence frequent collisions, obstinate, envenomed and bloody contests. The nation, prompted by ill will and resentment, sometimes impels to war the Government, contrary to the best calculations of policy. The Government sometimes participates in the national propensity, and adopts, through passion, what reason would reject; at other times, it makes the animosity of the nation subservient to projects of hostility instigated by pride, ambition and other sinister and pernicious motives. The peace often, sometimes perhaps the liberty of nations has been the victim.

So likewise, a passionate attachment of one nation for another produces a variety of evils. Sympathy for the favourite nation, facilitating the illusion of an imaginary common interest, in cases where no real common interest exists, and infusing into one the enmities of the other, betrays the former into a participation in the quarrels and wars of the latter, without adequate inducement or justification. It leads also to concessions to the favourite nation of privileges denied to others, which is apt doubly to injure the nation making the concessions, by unnecessarily parting with what ought to have been retained ; and by exciting jealousy, ill will and a disposition to retaliate, in the parties from whom equal privileges are withheld ; and it gives to ambitious, corrupted, or deluded citizens (who devote themselves to the favourite nation) facility to betray, or sacrifice the interests of their own country, without odium, sometimes even with popularity ; gilding with the appearances of a virtuous sense of obligation, a commendable deference for public opinion, or a laudable zeal for public good, the base or foolish compliances of ambition, corruption or infatuation.

As avenues to foreign influence—in innumerable ways, such attachments are particularly alarming to the truly enlightened and independent patriot. How many opportunities do they afford to tamper with domestic factions, to practice the arts of seduction, to mislead public opinion, to influence or awe the public councils. Such an attachment of a small or weak, towards a great and powerful nation, dooms the former to be the satellite of the latter.

Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence (I conjure you to believe me, fellow-citizens) the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake ; since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. But that jealousy to be useful must be impartial ; else it becomes the instrument of the very influence to be avoided, instead of a defence against it.—Excessive partiality for one foreign nation, and excessive dislike of another, cause those whom they actuate to see danger only on one side, and serve to veil and even second the arts of influence on the other.—Real patriots, who may resist the intrigues of the favourite, are liable to become suspected and odious ; while its tools and dupes usurp the applause and confidence of the people, to surrender their interests.

The great rule of conduct for us, in regard to foreign nations, is in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements, let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith.—Here let us stop.

Europe has a set of primary interests, which to us have none, or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties, in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics, or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships, or enmities.

Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. If we remain one people, under an efficient government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance ; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality, we may at any time resolve upon, to be scrupulously respected ; when belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not lightly hazard the giving us provocation ; when we may choose peace or war, as our interest, guided by justice, shall counsel.

Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation ? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground ? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalry, interest, humour or caprice ?

'Tis our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world ; so far, I mean, as we are now at liberty to do it ; for let me not be understood as capable of patronising infidelity to existing engagements. I hold the maxim no less applicable to public than to private affairs, that honesty is always the best policy. I repeat it, therefore, let those engagements be observed in their genuine sense. But, in my opinion, it is unnecessary and would be unwise to extend them.

Taking care always to keep ourselves, by suitable establishments, on a respectable defensive posture, we may safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies.

Harmony, liberal intercourse with all nations, are recommended by policy, humanity, and interest. But even our commercial policy should hold an equal and impartial hand ; neither seeking nor granting exclusive favours or preferences ; consulting the natural course of things ; diffusing and diversifying by gentle means the streams of commerce, but forcing nothing ; establishing, with powers so disposed, in order to give trade a stable course, to define the rights of our merchants, and to enable the government to support them ; conventional rules of intercourse, the best that present circumstances and mutual opinion will permit, but temporary, and liable to be from time to time abandoned or varied, as experience and circumstances shall dictate ; constantly keeping in view, that 'tis folly in one nation to look for disinterested favours from another ; that it must pay with a portion of its independence for whatever it may accept under that character ; that by such acceptance, it may place itself in the condition of having given equivalents for nominal favours, and yet of being reproached with ingratitude for not giving more. There can be no greater error than to expect, or calculate upon real favours from nation to nation. 'Tis an illusion which experience must cure, which a just pride ought to discard.

In offering to you, my countrymen, these counsels of an old and affectionate friend, I dare not hope they will make the strong and lasting impression I could wish ; that they will controul the usual current of the passions, or prevent our nation from running the course which has hitherto marked the destiny of nations : But if I may even flatter myself that they may be productive of some partial benefit, some occasional good ; that they may now and then recur to moderate the fury of party spirit, to warn against the mischiefs of foreign intrigues, to guard against the impostures of pretended patriotism ; this hope will be a full recompense for the solicitude for your welfare, by which they have been dictated.

How far, in the discharge of my official duties, I have been guided by the principles which have been delineated, the public records and other evidences of my conduct must witness to you and to the world. To myself, the assurance of my conscience is, that I have at least believed myself to be guided by them.

In relation to the still subsisting war in Europe, my proclamation of the 22d of April, 1793, is the index to my plan. Sanctioned by your approving voice and by that of your representatives in both houses of Congress, the spirit of that measure has continually governed me; uninfluenced by any attempts to deter or divert me from it.

After deliberate examination, with the aid of the best lights I could obtain, I was well satisfied that our country, under all the circumstances of the case, had a right to take, and was bound in duty and interest, to take a neutral position. Having taken it, I determined, as far as should depend upon me, to maintain it, with moderation, perseverance and firmness.

The considerations which respect the right to hold this conduct, it is not necessary on this occasion to detail. I will only observe, that according to my understanding of the matter, that right, so far from being denied by any of the belligerent powers, has been virtually admitted by all.

The duty of holding a neutral conduct may be inferred, without any thing more, from the obligation which justice and humanity impose on every nation, in cases in which it is free to act, to maintain inviolate the relations of peace and amity towards other nations.

The inducements of interest for observing that conduct will best be referred to your own reflections and experience. With me, a predominant motive has been to endeavour to gain time to our country to settle and mature its yet recent institutions, and to progress without interruption, to that degree of strength and consistency, which is necessary to give it, humanly speaking, the command of its own fortunes.

Though in reviewing the incidents of my administration, I am unconscious of intentional error; I am nevertheless too sensible of my defects not to think it probable that I may have committed many errors. Whatever they may be, I fervently beseech the Almighty to avert or mitigate the evils to which they may tend. I shall also carry with me the hope that my country will never cease to view them with indulgence; and that after forty-five years of my life dedicated to its service, with an upright zeal, the faults of incompetent abilities will be consigned to oblivion, as myself must soon be to the mansions of rest.

Relying on its kindness in this as in other things, and actuated by that fervent love towards it, which is so natural to a man, who views in it the native soil of himself and his progenitors for several generations; I anticipate with pleasing expectation that retreat, to which I promise myself to realize, without alloy, the sweet enjoyment of partaking, in the midst of my fellow-citizens, the benign influence of good laws under a free government—the ever favourite object of my heart, and the happy reward, as I trust, of our mutual cares, labours and dangers.

To James Linn, vice-president of the Council, and J. H. Imlay, speaker of the House of Assembly of the state of New-Jersey.

GENTLEMEN,

I am truly sensible of the honor done me by the concurrent and unanimous resolutions of the Council and House of Assembly of the state of New-Jersey, passed the 15th and 16th instant, approving my conduct in the administration of the government of the United States, and regretting my determination to retire from public life. They have also been pleased to express their acknowledgments for the sentiments contained in my late address to my fellow-citizens, which affection, respect, and solicitude for their lasting welfare, prompted me to lay before them. Such testimonies, while they manifest the kindness of the Council and Assembly, persuade me to believe that my services have been useful to my country, a consideration which will render their recollection dear to me to the latest period of my life.

Go: WASHINGTON.

United States, November 21, 1796.

Ordered, That the clerk furnish Mr. Day with a copy of the resolutions of the Legislature approving of the conduct of the President of the United States, with his answer, for publication.

The bill, intituled, "An act to regulate the election of members of the Legislative-Council and General Assembly, sheriffs and coroners in this state," was read a second time, and after some time spent thereon,

Ordered, That the further consideration thereof be postponed.

The house adjourned till three o'clock P. M.

The house met.

The house resumed the consideration of the bill, intituled, "An act to regulate the election of members of the Legislative-Council and General Assembly, sheriffs and coroners in this state, and after some time spent thereon.

Ordered, That the said bill be committed to Messrs. Vancleve, Southard and Cox.

Mr. Vancleve, from the committee appointed to consult with proper artisans and report their opinion as to the size and construction of a building for the confinement and employment of convicts, and make an estimate of the probable expense thereof, reported,

THAT they have consulted a mechanic, and a part of the committee, with the said mechanic, viewed the penitentiary prison in Philadelphia, and are of opinion, that it will be proper for this state to erect a building for the purpose of carrying into effect the law for the punishment of crimes, of the following size and construction, viz. For the accommodation of the prison-keeper and his assistants, a house about 42 feet by 46, two stories high, besides the ground story or cellar, with a piazza on the back-side next to the yard, and in view thereof; and for the accommodation of the prisoners, their confinement and employment, there be a wing at each end of the said house, the one about 70 feet long, the other about 55, and each about 30 feet wide, and two stories high besides the ground story, the upper rooms of which to be arched over-head; that there be a separate building sufficient for two cells, for solitary confinement; that the yard, consisting of a space of three hundred feet in length and two hundred and fifty in breadth, be enclosed with a stone wall twelve feet high, a plan or draught of which the committee submit to the house for their inspection; the expense of which is estimated at between four and five thousand pounds. Your committee further observe, that although the plan above proposed for the confinement and employment of the prisoners is small, yet, perhaps, sufficient for the present exigencies of the state, and, if not, the wings of the building may be extended to a sufficient length without any inconvenience or more additional expense than at present would be required. Your committee further observe, that, in their opinion, it will be necessary to purchase a lot of land, about two acres and a half, for the above purpose, and they take the liberty to recommend that a committee be appointed to view the ground and obtain conditions from the proprietor thereof for purchasing the same.

By order of the committee,

BENJAMIN VANCLEVE.

Ordered, That the said report be read a second time.

The bill, intituled, "An act to prevent gaming," was read a second time, debated and ordered to be engrossed.

The bill, intituled, "An act giving relief to creditors where prisoners for debt escape or die," was read a second time, debated and ordered a third reading.

The house adjourned till to-morrow morning ten of the clock.

Saturday, January 28, 1797.

The house met.

Mr. Stillwell attended and took his seat.

Mr. Dayton, from the committee to whom was referred the petition of Catharine Stockton, administratrix, &c. of Samuel Witham Stockton, esquire, deceased, presented the draught of a bill, intituled, "An act concerning the real estate of Samuel Witham Stockton, late of the county of Hunterdon, esquire, deceased;" which bill was read and ordered a second reading.

A petition from Peter Wintermute and Jacob Savekool, administrators, &c. of Jacob Smith, deceased, praying leave to present a bill to authorize some person or persons to complete certain contracts entered into by the deceased, relative to his real estate, was read and ordered a second reading.

The report of Mr. Vancleve of yesterday was read a second time and agreed to; whereupon,

Ordered, That Messrs. Stillwell, Hough and Cobb be a committee to confer with the proprietors of the land where it is proposed to erect the house of correction, and to report on what terms the lands required for the building may be had.

The bill, intituled, "An act concerning inns and taverns," was read a second time and committed to Messrs. Dayton, Clement and Condict.

Mr. Outwater, from Council, informed the house that Council had passed the bill, intituled, "An act to prevent the importation of convicts into this state," without amendment.

The engrossed bill, intituled, "An act to empower the governor of this state to incorporate a company to improve the navigation of the south branch of Great-Timber-Creek, in the county of Gloucester," was read and compared ;

Resolved unanimously, That the same do pass.

Ordered, That the speaker do sign the same.

Ordered, That Mr. Bowen do carry the said bill to Council for concurrence.

The house adjourned till three o'clock P. M.

The following resolution was proposed for the consideration of the house by Mr. Coxé :

Whereas it is of the first importance that the fundamental principles of the political association should be such as reason and experience have proved to be most conducive to public order and happiness ; and whereas time and observation have unfolded many very considerable errors and omissions in the frame of the constitution of the state of New-Jersey, as agreed to in convention on the 2d day of July, 1776 ; by reason whereof the people have not been equally represented in the Legislature, but according to the accidental and varying propositions of certain districts in counties containing a very disproportionate population ; and also, because military and civil ; the executive, judicial and legislative departments (which ought to be as distinct as possible) are united and intermixed, so as to cause confusion, innovation and expence, and all the bad consequences flowing from a government without checks, and without a precise principle of responsibility annexed to its several departments; and whereas it is right and expedient that the people should have an opportunity afforded to them, of peaceably and fairly investigating and revising the articles of their association long since formed, at the crisis of a revolution, and in circumstances unfavorable to an accurate adjustment of the political fabric; and whereas the existing constitution doth not point out any method to be observed in amending its defects when discovered:—Now, therefore, we the persons chosen to represent the people in the several counties of the state of New-Jersey, yielding to a consideration produced by the foregoing reasons, are of opinion, that a convention of delegates, of the people freely chosen, ought to be holden for the purpose of revising and amending the present charter of government; wherefore, we do hereby resolve and recommend, that at the days and times appointed by the constitution and laws of this state for the choosing of members of the Legislature and other officers for the ensuing year, the good people qualified to vote, do choose three persons in their several counties, by plurality of votes, to represent them in a General Convention, to be holden at on the day of next, for the purposes of revising, altering and amending the present constitution of the state, in such a manner and form as to the said convention shall seem meet.

THAT they have examined the several lots for sale in the town of Lamberton, and, after hearing the terms on which they can be had, and taking into consideration the advantages and disadvantages attending them, with the difference of the prices, are of opinion, that a certain lot the property of Mr. Peter Hunt, containing about six acres and a half, will best answer the purpose intended. Your committee further report, that they have received a map of the town of Lamberton, wherein the several vacant lots are designated, and also proposals containing their respective prices, all which are herewith submitted.

By order of the committee,

ABRAHAM KITCHEL,
JOSEPH STILLWELL.

Ordered, That the said report be read a second time.

Mr. Vancleve, from the committee to whom was referred the petition from a number of the inhabitants of the county of Monmouth, reported,

THAT they have taken into consideration the subject matter of the said petition and alteration prepared by the said petitioners relative thereto, and are of opinion, that although hardships and apparent injustice may sometimes be occasioned by reason of the power vested in executors and administrators, in giving a preference to creditors, yet that the provisions of the law ought not to be extended to the cases contemplated by the petitioners, so as to entirely do away the legal priority of debts; and they would submit as the result of their deliberations on this subject, that the interference of the legislature should not be carried further than to place creditors of the same degree on an equal footing.

By order of the committee,
BENJAMIN VANCLEVE.

Ordered, That the said report be read a second time.

And be it further enacted, That the troops of horse in the several counties in this state, in which there are three or more troops, shall be formed into squadrons and commanded by a major, to be appointed by the joint-meeting and commissioned by the commander in chief; and the said squadrons shall yearly, on the third Mondays in May and September, assemble for exercise at such place as the commanding officer thereof shall appoint; and if two or more squadrons shall be called into actual service, the senior major shall command with the rank and pay of a lieutenant-colonel; and the cavalry and artillery of this state, when called into actual service, shall be subject to such temporary appointments and arrangements as the commander in chief of this state, for the time being, may deem necessary.

Ordered, That the said report be read a second time with the militia bill.

A motion was made, that the house go into the following resolution:

Resolved, That the following letter of instructions be sent to the representatives of this state in the Senate of the United States:

To John Rutherford and Richard Stockton, Esquires.

Gentlemen,

The Legislature observing, by the publication of the debates of the federal government, that it is in contemplation to levy a direct tax on the real estates of the good people of America, in order to raise or increase the revenue of the United States, and at the same time proposing to increase the pay of the members of the legislature and raise the salaries of the officers of the different departments of the government. The Legislature of New-Jersey observe with concern, that measures, which to them appear not only unpopular, but prejudicial to the true interest of this country, should be agitated and countenanced by your honourable house. Direct taxation, in a country so extensive, and where real property is so varient in value, added to the great expense and uncertainty of the collection, induces a belief that an increase of indirect taxes would be the less evil of the two; and if subjects cannot be found proper for indirect taxes, adequate to the exigencies of the union, the increasing the pay and salaries of the officers of government is highly improper and will be obnoxious to the citizens of this state, who generally view the pay and salaries at present established, too high for the services rendered, more especially so, taking into consideration the nature of our government, being founded on republican principles, the circumstances of our fiscal obligations and the embarrassments of our mercantile interests.

The Legislature therefore request and instruct you, gentlemen, as the representatives of this state in the Senate of the United States, to use your influence in that honorable house, to prevent, as far as in your power, the passing any act for levying a direct tax, or for increasing the pay and salaries contemplated and above referred to.

Which resolution was read and ordered a second reading.

The house adjourned till three o'clock P. M.

Mr. Clement, with leave, presented the draught of a bill, intituled, "An act to suspend the operation of an act, intituled, "An act for laying out, opening and improving certain roads in the counties of Cumberland, Salem, Gloucester and Burlington, in this state, so far as respects the roads from Roadstown and Bridgetown, in the county of Cumberland, to Woodbury in the county of Gloucester;" which bill was read and ordered a second reading.

The speaker laid before the house the following report :

The attorney-general, to whom was referred the report of Mr. Vancleve on the Monmouth petition, begs leave to submit the following report :

THAT, under the existing laws of this state, an executor or administrator is entitled to give a preference to such creditors as he may think proper, where more than one possesses the same and highest degree of evidence of their debts ; that the policy of this discretion may be highly questionable, as it may in many instances defeat entirely the claims of those who are in justice equally intituled ; that in some cases the wisdom of the Legislature hath made provision for an equal distribution of the estate to all creditors where there is not sufficient to pay the whole, such as in that of an absconding debtor and in that of insolvency. He would therefore beg leave to suggest the propriety of passing a law to controul the power which is vested in executors and administrators to discriminate between those whose precaution have placed them upon the same footing in point of priority, so that there may be an equal distribution as to those debts should it be thought improper to extend the provision further.

AN. DN. WOODRUFF, Attorney-General.

Which report was read and ordered a second reading.

Mr. Dayton, from the joint-committee of the Council and General Assembly, appointed to inspect the office and confer with the secretary on the subject of his letter, dated 9th November, 1796, reported,

THAT they have inspected the office agreeably to their appointment, and that upon examination it appears to them, that the office would be more secure if there were iron shutters affixed on the inner side of the windows ; that some of the old files of original wills, letters of administration, &c. &c. are irregular, as well with respect to the order of time as the counties to which they belong ; that from the observation of your committee it appears, that the present secretary has paid great attention to the office since his appointment ; that he hath recorded all the letters of administration, wills and other papers which were deposited in said office since the second day of July, 1776, agreeably to law, and that so far as original papers have been filed by the present secretary they appear to be properly filed and arranged.

The committee are of opinion that some provision ought to be made to arrange the irregular files in proper order, and to prevent the books of records and original papers from being taken out of the office as evidence, or for any other purpose, and recommend the passing a law to prevent the same.

By order of the committee,

ABRAHAM KITCHEL,
ELIAS DAYTON.

Which report was read and ordered a second reading.
